Quarterly fund commentary

Asia Pacific ex Japan equity markets fell in the last quarter of 2016. The rising uncertainty surrounding policy in the US, especially trade, influenced investor flows. Rising US bond yields and Asian currency weakness also played a role in dampening sentiment for the region. The weakness was widespread across China, Hong Kong, India and most of the ASEAN markets. Asian infrastructure related sector performance was mixed. The energy and materials sector outperformed as commodity prices continued to strengthen, which was also positive for Australia. The industrials sector was weak due to policy developments or political setbacks that impaired fiscal spending, such as in India and Korea. The more defensive telecommunication services and utility sectors struggled due to rising price competition and investors favouring cyclically oriented sectors. Despite the market weakness, Asian economic fundamentals continued to improve, evident in firmer exports, production and retail sales in many countries. Infrastructure spending also was relatively solid in some countries. China continues to focus on lifting infrastructure investments to support growth and countries, such as India and ASEAN countries plan infrastructure build-outs. In terms of our investment strategy, we favour companies with sustainable earnings growth in sectors such as industrials, telecom and utilities. Our country positioning maintains its tilt toward China, India and ASEAN countries.
