Quarterly fund commentary

The second quarter of 2015 played host to several events that impacted the financial markets. Chief amongst them was the escalation of the Greek financial crisis, and the unsuccessful attempts of the country's government to negotiate with its creditors. In China, equity markets declined following the sharp rise of its local equity markets over the past year. Weaker than expected economic data across key markets and the expected interest rate hike by the US Federal Reserve (Fed) further added to the heightened volatility seen across all three asset classes the fund is exposed to. In this market environment, global equity markets surrendered much of their early period gains. Bond markets generally declined in anticipation of the Fed's plan of raising interest rates later this year, as well as the receding deflationary fears in Europe. Commodity markets produced mixed returns. Hostile weather conditions contributed to positive returns within agriculture, while the energy sector was able to hold on to gains from earlier in the quarter. However, metals were weak on concerns that a slowing economy would negatively impact demand.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Whilst the overall risk of the fund intends to be consistent with that of a balanced portfolio of equity and debt securities, this may not be achieved. The fund will make significant use of financial derivatives for investment purposes in excess of the value of the portfolio that could lead to large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund uses derivatives to gain leverage which can potentially be up to three times the value of its net assets. The fund will gain exposure to commodities to diversify the risk of the fund. Commodities are generally considered to be high risk investments and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. The risks described herein are the fund specific material risks. For more information please consult the current fund and share class specific Key Investor Information Document (KIID) and for a complete set of risks the current prospectus. If you are unsure of any of these risks please contact your advisor.
