Quarterly fund commentary

The two main issues driving asset class behaviour for the quarter were normalization of policy by central banks and fears of a trade war breaking out between the US and China. Earlier in the period, the dominant influence on market behaviour was the activity of central banks which stoked fears that rising interest rates would have an adverse impact on bonds, while equities enjoyed the carryover of momentum from 2017. Most commodities outside of precious and industrial metals fared well. In the latter two months of the period, volatility returned after a prolonged absence as investors reacted to a new leader of the Federal Reserve and protectionist rhetoric from the US leading to fears of a trade war. These catalysts drove equity prices lower while bond yields retreated, as investors sought perceived 'safe-havens' due to the return of volatility. Commodity prices had varied reactions. At period end, these crosscurrents left results across all three asset classes in negative territory. In the near-term, the market will cautiously watch whether the sabre-rattling between the US and China will develop any further or will simply remain a war of words. What follows may have implications across equities, bonds and commodities.

Each period starts at the end of the indicated month. The first indicated month may not represent a full month and may start only on the launch/restructuring date indicated in the headline.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. Changes in interest rates will result in fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund uses derivatives (complex instruments) for investment purposes, which may result in the Fund being significantly leveraged and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. Investment in instruments providing exposure to commodities is generally considered to be high risk which may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
