Quarterly fund commentary

Euro corporate bond markets had a challenging second quarter with higher German Bund yields and concerns over Greece both impacting on returns. After rallying in the first few weeks of the quarter Bunds sold off sharply. This in turn affected euro corporate bonds whose yields also rose. Rising uncertainty as a result of the increasingly acrimonious negotiations between Greece and its creditors had a negative effect on the market's appetite for risk. As a result the yield spread between corporate bonds and Bunds widened. According to data from Merrill Lynch, euro investment grade corporate bonds returned -2.8% over the quarter while Bunds returned -4.5% (total returns in euros). The fund is positioned defensively, with significant exposure to cash and other highly liquid assets. It holds a diversified portfolio of investment-grade bonds and has only a modest allocation to high yield bonds (excluding-financials). Many of our holdings are in subordinated bank debt. In our view these securities offer the defensive qualities we are looking for while still providing a reasonable level of income. We see similar opportunities in the junior debt of other sectors.
