Quarterly fund commentary

Volatility picked up significantly during the third quarter. Investor worries were centered around potential rising interest rates in US, weaker economic growth in China and other emerging markets and low commodities prices which might be a precursor of a global recession. In addition some stock specific news frightened market participants and made them aware of stock specific risks in the equity market. Government bonds benefitted from these worries and delivered positive returns for the quarter across the globe. The fund seeks a positive return over the medium-term, irrespective of market developments, and seeks to have a pre-defined level of risk through the application of both a Global Market Neutral and Financial Futures strategy. The investments made within these strategies are determined by the outcome of quantitative models for stock selection and tactical asset allocation. During the quarter, the fund's performance was positive. Our Global Market Neutral strategy performed positive as stock selection model worked well across the globe. Our Financial Futures strategy delivered slightly negative returns as we mostly held long equity positions that could not be fully compensated by long bond positions.
